MEDCHI RELAUNCHES BUSINESS OF MEDICINE PROGRAM FOR PHYSICIANS

BALTIMORE, January 12, 2016 — Today, MedChi is announcing the re-launch of its Business of Medicine Program. The program is online and available today.

MedChi, The Maryland State Medical Society, understands that a physicians greatest challenge in healthcare today is not clinical. Their greatest challenge is to deliver safe and effective care to patients at a low cost. This is a challenge that requires knowledge and utilization of business skills. The Business of Medicine – Improving Patient Outcomes program provides those skills. That is why MedChi is reviving its Business of Medicine program. This program consists of online courses, developed by physicians and business professionals with experience at every level of healthcare. The courses are specifically designed to empower you to make better decisions resulting in superior patient outcomes. Every course consists of streaming video easily accessible by any smart device, 24/7/365, and comes with the opportunity to earn a MedChi CME certificate. Physicians can access individual courses, selected packages, or earn a MedChi of Maryland Business of Medicine Achievement Certificate.

Dr. Brooke Buckley, President of MedChi, states "we are proud to expand our offerings to include the Business of Medicine program." You can find more information about this offering by visiting:
